Part One: Turning Point USA, its Central Figures, Outgrowths, and Affiliates

Introductions and Disclaimers: this is a regularly updated compendium of sources intended to be of service to those who are committed to resisting and challenging the emergent authoritarianism fueled by the Trump administration, its benefactors, associates and allies. It includes a wide variety of organizations, names, and connections. It is a testimonial to free speech. All of its contents are publicly accessible and include web-addresses. It is organized thematically and alphabetically for easy look-up (by first name first). I make no claim to completeness, and I'm always open to additions so long as these sources are directly relevant to the compendium and are web-accessible. The best way to think of this collection is as sets of samples that aid in further research and encourage a clearer understanding of the emergence of a deeply troubling nationalistic, racist, xenophobic and misogynist movement in the United States and elsewhere. While my hope is that this compendium is of use to scholars, activists, and citizens working to preserve the democracy and resist fascism, its inclusions range from more scholarly journalistic work (for example, Politico, ProPublica, The New Republic, The New Yorker, The Atlantic, The Intercept) to well-respected news outlets such as the New York Times, the Washington Post, CNN, to far-right hit-piece machines like the Daily Caller, the Daily Wire, Briertbart, World Net Daily, the Daily Stormer, FrontPageMag, Red Ice (3Fourteen), Rebel Media, and InfoWars. I have also included social media platforms such as Twitter, Facebook, Instagram, Gab, LinkedIn, and Bumble. The compendium includes a wide range of the far right—from self-avowed Neo-Nazis and Holocaust deniers to their more gentile, but equally ideologically toxic, analogues on the “New Right.” It includes the Alt-Right, nativists, ethnostate separatists, identitarians, and Alt-Liters. It doesn't include mainstream libertarians, moderate Republicans, or philosophical conservatives, although there is a compelling argument to be made that white nationalists have hi-jacked the GOP. All included are public figures and/or publicly recognizable organizations. I have not drawn a hard and fast distinction between these classifications—I leave it to the reader to make that judgment, but there are sources that do, and I have listed these in the section titled “General Information.”

The compendium includes articles that detail the tensions and divisions among groups and individuals; some of these internecine conflicts are very ugly, but many are simply comical in their efforts to avoid the appearance of bigotry. One excellent example of this is the “Rally Against Political Violence.” Billed as a counter-protest to Richard Spencer’s “Freedom of Speech Rally,” at the Lincoln Memorial, the “Rally Against Political Violence” boasted a number of speakers who seek to deliver on the appearance of a less racist, more civil white nationalism. But, as the many selections in the compendium make clear, the difference here is little more than cosmetic. It’s like comparing the Ku Klux Klan to the John Birch Society; the former may be more flagrantly violent and abhorrent—but the members of the latter believe in the same suite of racist and misogynist ideologies. Indeed, I’d argue the latter are more dangerous in that they’ve armed themselves with a dog-whistle vocabulary, a savvy use of social media platforms, and an insidious approach to recruiting young adults with the promise of making hate—thinly disguised as the “defense of Western ideals” or “real manhood”—“cool.” Fact is, these groups pose a real danger to democratic institutions. By convincing young folks that their professors are out to indoctrinate them, that the media is “fake,” that climate change is a “Leftist hoax,” that there’s no such thing as racially motivated police brutality, that making America great requires demonizing immigrants, and that breaking up migrant families is consistent with American values (or human rights), the far “Alt” right has sewn seeds whose fruit will bear fascism. Some will benefit greatly—but they’ll be largely the same white wealthy Western(ized) men who benefit now, the men threatened by the prospect of a genuinely democratic non-patriarchal social order.

Among the myths I hope glossing through some of these entries dispels is that the rhetoric of references to “Saving the West,” “It’s Ok to be white,” or “protecting Western Civilization” is anything other than a thinly concealed dog whistle to the intended base of, broadly speaking, Alt-Right personalities and organizations. Same goes for the rise of the Incels, the “Return of the Knights,” and those who’d criminalize abortion in their fantasy of a world modelled on the Handmaid’s Tale. Among the most fascinating reads are those of the women who promote these ideologies; it’s hard to imagine a more self-defeating worldview, or one more dependent on the labor and resources of developing world others. Among the themes the compendium tracks are the profound and often violent renditions of anti-feminist arguments and, in some cases, the unvarnished misogyny that stands out as a common theme particularly among those incarnations of white nationalism that seek to portray white men as victims of a culture that they’re no longer entitled to dominate (though, under Donald Trump they’ve certainly made this effort). While this anti-gay, anti-reproductive rights, muscular effort to reinstall heteropatriarchal institutions large and small is commonly cloaked in rhetoric that’s more explicitly racist, anti-Semitic, and/or militaristic, it makes clear that the place of women is subjugation to men—all the more so for non-white women. There are a good many arguments here, again, thinly veiled in other themes, that require a view of women as “naturally” in need of dominating male protection, as biologically programmed to want that protection for themselves and their presumed offspring, and as mentally ill if they reject male advances. The reader will also find a number of threads that, taken together, make sense of the emergence of the latest iteration of toxic masculinity, the Incel (the Involuntary Celibate). The Incel seeks to justify compulsory heterosexuality and/or female monogamy on the grounds that because women are shallow consumers of “lookism,” and thus empowered to turn away less attractive male sexual partners, men are entitled to institutions that enforce female sexual compliance. To be clear, I am not suggesting that every iteration of the Alt-Right and its fellow travelers share this absurd view of women, but it is unmistakably common to the ligature of this ideological universe to see women as inferior; the Incel movement is simply one foreseeable instantiation of a worldview predicated on white male entitlement.

I think it's also true that we're beginning to see the slow-motion implosion of the Alt-Right. From internal schisms to competition for the mantle of Alt-Right purity to back-biting to celebrity-mongering—there is much and fractious shrieking from inside a tent that was never that big to begin with. The recent efforts of Alt-Righters to distance themselves from QAnon are particularly head-shaking given that it's precisely the same penchant for conspiracy mongering that gave rise to Birtherism, Climate Change Trutherism, Pizzagate, and a host of other absurd conspiracy theories that gave birth to QAnon.

I am open to corrections, but I make no promises to remove an article simply on the grounds of offense. We don't live in that country—yet. To those who'd complain that this compendium is a "Leftist" analogue to TPUSA's Professor Watchlist, and thus subject to the same complaint of hypocrisy, I say this: plainly, no. TP-PWL's aims are to encourage harassment, censorship, and the repression of legitimate academic scholarship and pedagogy. Mine are to offer a topographical map of a wide range of agents and actors who, taken together, represent a vision of America radically different from the country we have now—a country whose institutions are profoundly endangered by this vision, especially as it's currently personified in President Trump, his family, his cabinet, his associates and alliances. My aims, in other words, are to contribute to the defense and preservation of my country's Constitution and Bill of Rights, its promise to equality, diversity, justice, compassion, opportunity, and political enfranchisement.

The compendium's first part is devoted to Turning Point USA, including past and current leaders, outgrowth organizations, and "think tanks." Among the many reasons for this point of departure is that because TPUSA serves as one central pivot around which many of the other sources turn either closely or through degrees of connection ranging from Neo-Nazi to Alt-Right, from Alt-Lite to New Right, and more recently to Evangelical Christian Neo-Fascism. It's also where this larger project began—with my effort to convince my own university that Professor Watchlist was a real danger to the academy, and the TPUSA does, in fact, deliberately misrepresent their objectives and tactics. There is modest overlap in inclusion across the compendium (though I have sought to minimize this as much as possible)—some articles just do belong in two or more sections. The complete index is at the bottom of each of four (currently) parts. After part one, the compendium is alphabetized, first name first. The index is alphabetized, last name first.

 - a. Cited as “the person who has influenced me above all” concerning the terrorist attack in Christchurch, NZ, 3.14.19:

From where did you receive/research/develop your beliefs?
The internet, of course. You will not find the truth anywhere else.

Is there a particular person that radicalized you the most?
Yes, the person that has influenced me above all was Candace Owens. Each time she spoke I was stunned by her insights and her own views helped push me further and further into the belief of violence over meekness. Though I will have to disavow some of her beliefs, the extreme actions she calls for are too much, even for my tastes.

Were you taught violence and extremism by video games, music, literature, cinema?
Yes, Spyro the dragon 3 taught me ethno-nationalism. Fortnite trained me to be a killer and to floss on the corpses of my enemies.
No.

 - Believes that validating transgender identity is “non-biological” and “harmful to society.”

 - Excused Trump’s policy to ban trans soldiers because “the military is not a social experiment”
 - Tweeted a news story about a gender-neutral high school event with the line “when you think it can’t get any worse.”

“Turning Point USA is a nonprofit whose stated mission is to “identify, educate, train, and organize students to promote the principles of fiscal responsibility, free markets, and limited government.” The group’s tagline is “big government sucks,” and a recent video advertising the group’s presence at the 2017 Conservative Political Action Conference (CPAC) included several millennials repeating the tagline into the camera as club music played in the background. Turning Point USA is the project of Charlie Kirk, a 23-year-old conservative “boy wonder” who spoke at the 2016 Republican National Convention, describing work to push “free markets and free people” on college campuses, “the most treacherous terrain imaginable.” He reportedly visited Trump Tower in November to give “advice on young people and millennials and outreach” to undisclosed members of the presidential transition team. In February, he made an appearance on Fox News’ Hannity with Eric Trump and Donald Trump Jr. to discuss how college campuses are “islands of totalitarianism & intolerance” for students with “conservative or freedom beliefs.” Kirk has publicly aligned himself with Milo Yiannopoulos in the past, and college chapters of Turning Point USA sponsored several stops on Yiannopoulos’ ill-fated campus harassment tour earlier this year. Turning Point USA is also closely affiliated with the dangerous “citizen journalist” vigilante work of James O’Keefe and Project Veritas, and the group recently delved into its own warped citizen journalism project with the launch of a McCarthyist “Professor Watchlist” project in late 2016. The public list of supposedly “biased” professors -- which included individuals’ photos and asked for public submissions of “video/photo evidence” of alleged bias -- mostly cited right-wing student reporter website Campus Reform, as well as conservative student blog The College Fix, hate group David Horowitz Freedom Center, The Blaze, FoxNews.com, and unfounded videos from Project Veritas. Kirk’s group claims to have a “presence” on 1,000 college and high school campuses nationally. This presence includes operating a “national field program” to educate and unite students around “free market values” and supporting 350 campus chapters and 750 “like-minded student groups.” Another project of Turning Point USA, Hypeline News, is a “young-adult driven social news site” that employs college-age writers and says it’s “taking back the media.” According to leaked messages from two Turning Point staffers obtained by the Ohio State University student newspaper The Lantern, the group may also be funding individual student government races. It has also been involved in at least two lawsuits alleging campus discrimination against conservatives -- one supported by the Foundation for Individual Rights in Education, and another in which the group was represented by the anti-LGBTQ hate group Alliance Defending Freedom. Turning Point USA lists the Leadership Institute, the Intercollegiate Studies Institute, National School Choice Week, Heritage Action, the Heartland Institute, and the David Horowitz Freedom Center among its “partners.”

ADF also works to develop “religious liberty” legislation and case law that will allow the denial of goods and services to LGBT people on the basis of religion. Despite its regular defamation of LGBT people, the group has managed to win special advisory status at the United Nations, in the European Union, and with the Organization of American States.”

Part Two: 3 Percenters-FrontPageMag (David Horowitz)

Introductions and Disclaimers: this is a regularly updated compendium of sources intended to be of service to those who are committed to resisting and challenging the emergent authoritarianism fueled by the Trump administration, its benefactors, associates and allies. It includes a wide variety of organizations, names, and connections. It is a testimonial to free speech. All of its contents are publicly accessible and include web-addresses. It is organized thematically and alphabetically for easy look-up (by first name first). I make no claim to completeness, and I'm always open to additions so long as these sources are directly relevant to the compendium and are web-accessible. The best way to think of this collection is as sets of samples that aid in further research and encourage a clearer understanding of the emergence of a deeply troubling nationalistic, racist, xenophobic and misogynist movement in the United States and elsewhere. While my hope is that this compendium is of use to scholars, activists, and citizens working to preserve the democracy and resist fascism, its inclusions range from more scholarly journalistic work (for example, Politico, ProPublica, The New Republic, The New Yorker, The Atlantic, The Intercept) to well-respected news outlets such as the New York Times, the Washington Post, CNN, to far-right hit-piece machines like the Daily Caller, the Daily Wire, Brietbart, World Net Daily, the Daily Stormer, FrontPageMag, Red Ice (3Fourteen), Rebel Media, and InfoWars. I have also included social media platforms such as Twitter, Facebook, Instagram, Gab, LinkedIn, and Bumble. The compendium includes a wide range of the far right—from self-avowed Neo-Nazis and Holocaust deniers to their more genteel, but equally ideologically toxic, analogues on the “New Right.” It includes the Alt-Right, nativists, ethnostate separatists, identitarians, and Alt-Liters. It doesn't include mainstream libertarians, moderate Republicans, or philosophical conservatives, although there is a compelling argument to be made that white nationalists have hi-jacked the GOP. All included are public figures and/or publicly recognizable organizations. I have not drawn a hard and fast distinction between these classifications—I leave it to the reader to make that judgment, but there are sources that do, and I have listed these in the section titled “General Information.”

The compendium includes articles that detail the tensions and divisions among groups and individuals; some of these internecine conflicts are very ugly, but many are simply comical in their efforts to avoid the appearance of bigotry. One excellent example of this is the “Rally Against Political Violence.” Billed as a counter-protest to Richard Spencer’s “Freedom of Speech Rally,” at the Lincoln Memorial, the “Rally Against Political Violence” boasted a number of speakers who seek to deliver on the appearance of a less racist, more civil white nationalism. But, as the many selections in the compendium make clear, the difference here is little more than cosmetic. It’s like comparing the Ku Klux Klan to the John Birch Society; the former may be more flagrantly violent and abhorrent—but the members of the latter believe in the same suite of racist and misogynist ideologies. Indeed, I’d argue the latter are more dangerous in that they’ve armed themselves with a dog-whistle vocabulary, a savvy use of social media platforms, and an insidious approach to recruiting young adults with the promise of making hate—thinly disguised as the “defense of Western ideals” or “real manhood”—“cool.” Fact is, these groups pose a real danger to democratic institutions. By convincing young folks that their professors are out to indoctrinate them, that the media is “fake,” that climate change is a “Leftist hoax,” that there’s no such thing as racially motivated police brutality, that making America great requires demonizing immigrants, and that breaking up migrant families is consistent with American values (or human rights), the far “Alt” right has sewn seeds whose fruit will bear fascism. Some will benefit greatly—but they’ll be largely the same white wealthy Western(ized) men who benefit now, the men threatened by the prospect of a genuinely democratic non-patriarchal social order. One thing has become ever clearer since I began this project: however good or bad the ideas of writers like Karl Marx or the development and critique of his ideas in Post-Marxian Theory, Critical Theory, Post-Modernism, and Post-Structuralism, all things “Marx” have become the straw targets of those who, often in the name of “traditional Western values,” or even God, are eager to defend a racist, misogynist, hereditarian, and deterministic worldview.

Among the myths I hope glossing through some of these entries dispels is that the rhetoric of references to “Saving the West,” “It’s Ok to be white,” or “protecting Western Civilization” is anything other than a thinly concealed dog whistle to the intended base of, broadly speaking, Alt-Right personalities and organizations. Same goes for the rise of the Incels, the “Return of the Knights,” and those who’d criminalize abortion in their fantasy of a world modelled on the Handmaid’s Tale. Among the most fascinating reads are those of the women who promote these ideologies; it’s hard to imagine a more self-defeating worldview, or one more dependent on the labor and resources of developing world others. Among the themes the compendium tracks are the profound and often violent renditions of anti-feminist arguments and, in some cases, the unvarnished misogyny that stands out as a common theme particularly among those incarnations of white nationalism that seek to portray white men as victims of a culture that they’re no longer entitled to dominate (though, under Donald Trump they’ve certainly made this effort). While this anti-gay, anti-reproductive rights, muscular effort to reinstall heteropatriarchal institutions large and small is commonly cloaked in rhetoric that’s more explicitly racist, anti-Semitic, and/or militaristic, it makes clear that the place of women is subjugation to men—all the more so for non-white women. There are a good many arguments here, again, thinly veiled in other themes, that require a view of women as “naturally” in need of dominating male protection, as biologically programmed to want that protection for themselves and their presumed offspring, and as mentally ill if they reject male advances. The reader will also find a number of threads that, taken together, make sense of the emergence of the latest iteration of toxic masculinity, the Incel (the Involuntary Celibate). The Incel seeks to justify compulsory heterosexuality and/or female monogamy on the grounds that because women are shallow consumers of “lookism,” and thus empowered to turn away less attractive male sexual partners, men are entitled to institutions that enforce female sexual compliance. To be clear, I am not suggesting that every iteration of the Alt-Right and its fellow travelers share this absurd view of women, but it is unmistakably common to the ligature of this ideological universe to see women as inferior; the Incel movement is simply one foreseeable instantiation of a worldview predicated on white male entitlement.

I think it’s also true that we’re beginning to see the slow-motion implosion of the Alt-Right. From internal schisms to competition for the mantle of Alt-Right purity to back-biting to celebrity-mongering—there is much and fractious shrieking from inside a tent that was never that big to begin with. The recent efforts of Alt-Righters to distance themselves from QAnon are particularly head-shaking given that it’s precisely the same penchant for conspiracy mongering that gave rise to Birtherism, Climate Change Trutherism, Pizzagate, and a host of other absurd conspiracy theories that gave birth to QAnon.

I am open to corrections, but I make no promises to remove an article simply on the grounds of offense. We don’t live in that country—yet. To those who’d complain that this compendium is a “Leftist” analogue to TPUSA’s Professor Watchlist, and thus subject to the same complaint of hypocrisy, I say this: plainly, no. TP-PWL’s aims are to encourage harassment, censorship, and the repression of legitimate academic scholarship and pedagogy. Mine are to offer a topographical map of a wide range of agents and actors who, taken together, represent a vision of America radically different from the country we have now—a country whose institutions are profoundly endangered by this vision, especially as it’s currently personified in President Trump, his family, his cabinet, his associates and alliances. My aims, in other words, are to contribute to the defense and preservation of my country’s Constitution and Bill of Rights, its promise to equality, diversity, justice, compassion, opportunity, and political enfranchisement.

The compendium’s first section is devoted to Turning Point USA because it serves as one central pivot around which many of the other sources turn either closely or through degrees of connection ranging from Neo-Nazi to Alt-Right, from Alt-Lite to New Right. It’s also where this larger project began—with my effort to convince my own university that Professor Watchlist was a real danger to the academy, and the TPUSA does, in fact, deliberately misrepresent their objectives and tactics. There is modest overlap in inclusion across the compendium (though I have sought to minimize this as much as possible)—some articles just do belong in two or more sections.

 - e. <https://www.washingtonexaminer.com/opinion/turning-point-usa-leaks-screenshots-to-infowars>: “Loose lips sink ships, and apparently loose lips at Turning Point USA leak to Infowars, the conspiracy theory outlet that pushes stories about gay frogs, crisis actors at school shootings, and intergalactic spiritual forces possessing the bodies of presidential candidates. The Young America’s Foundation warned in an internal memo that TPUSA and its founder Charlie Kirk could cause “long-term damage” to conservative students and the conservative movement. A report by the Washington Examiner detailed portions of that memo Wednesday afternoon. While Kirk and TPUSA Chief Operating Officer Tyler Bowyer declined to comment for that story, they passed along an official statement through a spokesman after viewing screenshots of the YAF document to prove its veracity. That memo was not made public until late Thursday morning when the Young America's Foundation published it in its entirety. Somehow on Wednesday evening, screenshots — images identical to the ones the Washington Examiner shared with Kirk and Bowyer — made their way into hands of Paul Joseph Watson. Kirk and Bowyer did not respond to requests for comment for this story.”

15. <https://youtu.be/3vw9N96E-aQ> : "If you have haven't yet watched Q Anon's "The Plan to Save the World" — do it now. "Yes folks. The criminals I am referring to are famous politicians, actors, singers, CEOs and celebrities. People who have earned our trust, respect and admiration. They have done very bad things that are all fully known and documented, and they will be severely punished. Those of us who have followed Q since the beginning will be here to help you make sense of the coming events. We are among the first to realize that our petty partisan divisions are just trivial distractions, and we are all enslaved by a hidden enemy. We realize that the problem was never Capitalism or Socialism, Democrat or Republican, black or white, Muslim or Christian. We know it was just very powerful criminals who had too much power and were crushing us under debt and asinine entertainment, Fellow slaves. It's time to buckle your seatbelt, recognize your true enemy, and embrace a new future that we all owe to the brave patriots who risked their lives to achieve this victory against the greatest force of evil the world has ever seen."

Part Two: 3 Percenters-FrontPageMag (David Horowitz)

Introductions and Disclaimers: this is a regularly updated compendium of sources intended to be of service to those who are committed to resisting and challenging the emergent authoritarianism fueled by the Trump administration, its benefactors, associates and allies. It includes a wide variety of organizations, names, and connections. It is a testimonial to free speech. All of its contents are publicly accessible and include web-addresses. It is organized thematically and alphabetically for easy look-up (by first name first). I make no claim to completeness, and I'm always open to additions so long as these sources are directly relevant to the compendium and are web-accessible. The best way to think of this collection is as sets of samples that aid in further research and encourage a clearer understanding of the emergence of a deeply troubling nationalistic, racist, xenophobic and misogynist movement in the United States and elsewhere. While my hope is that this compendium is of use to scholars, activists, and citizens working to preserve the democracy and resist fascism, its inclusions range from more scholarly journalistic work (for example, Politico, ProPublica, The New Republic, The New Yorker, The Atlantic, The Intercept) to well-respected news outlets such as the New York Times, the Washington Post, CNN, to far-right hit-piece machines like the Daily Caller, the Daily Wire, Brietbart, World Net Daily, the Daily Stormer, FrontPageMag, Red Ice (3Fourteen), Rebel Media, and InfoWars. I have also included social media platforms such as Twitter, Facebook, Instagram, Gab, LinkedIn, and Bumble. The compendium includes a wide range of the far right—from self-avowed Neo-Nazis and Holocaust deniers to their more genteel, but equally ideologically toxic, analogues on the “New Right.” It includes the Alt-Right, nativists, ethnostate separatists, identitarians, and Alt-Liters. It doesn't include mainstream libertarians, moderate Republicans, or philosophical conservatives, although there is a compelling argument to be made that white nationalists have hi-jacked the GOP. All included are public figures and/or publicly recognizable organizations. I have not drawn a hard and fast distinction between these classifications—I leave it to the reader to make that judgment, but there are sources that do, and I have listed these in the section titled “General Information.”

The compendium includes articles that detail the tensions and divisions among groups and individuals; some of these internecine conflicts are very ugly, but many are simply comical in their efforts to avoid the appearance of bigotry. One excellent example of this is the “Rally Against Political Violence.” Billed as a counter-protest to Richard Spencer’s “Freedom of Speech Rally,” at the Lincoln Memorial, the “Rally Against Political Violence” boasted a number of speakers who seek to deliver on the appearance of a less racist, more civil white nationalism. But, as the many selections in the compendium make clear, the difference here is little more than cosmetic. It’s like comparing the Ku Klux Klan to the John Birch Society; the former may be more flagrantly violent and abhorrent—but the members of the latter believe in the same suite of racist and misogynist ideologies. Indeed, I’d argue the latter are more dangerous in that they’ve armed themselves with a dog-whistle vocabulary, a savvy use of social media platforms, and an insidious approach to recruiting young adults with the promise of making hate—thinly disguised as the “defense of Western ideals” or “real manhood”—“cool.” Fact is, these groups pose a real danger to democratic institutions. By convincing young folks that their professors are out to indoctrinate them, that the media is “fake,” that climate change is a “Leftist hoax,” that there’s no such thing as racially motivated police brutality, that making America great requires demonizing immigrants, and that breaking up migrant families is consistent with American values (or human rights), the far “Alt” right has sewn seeds whose fruit will bear fascism. Some will benefit greatly—but they’ll be largely the same white wealthy Western(ized) men who benefit now, the men threatened by the prospect of a genuinely democratic non-patriarchal social order. One thing has become ever clearer since I began this project: however good or bad the ideas of writers like Karl Marx or the development and critique of his ideas in Post-Marxian Theory, Critical Theory, Post-Modernism, and Post-Structuralism, all things “Marx” have become the straw targets of those who, often in the name of “traditional Western values,” or even God, are eager to defend a racist, misogynist, hereditarian, and deterministic worldview.

Among the myths I hope glossing through some of these entries dispels is that the rhetoric of references to “Saving the West,” “It’s Ok to be white,” or “protecting Western Civilization” is anything other than a thinly concealed dog whistle to the intended base of, broadly speaking, Alt-Right personalities and organizations. Same goes for the rise of the Incels, the “Return of the Knights,” and those who’d criminalize abortion in their fantasy of a world modelled on the Handmaid’s Tale. Among the most fascinating reads are those of the women who promote these ideologies; it’s hard to imagine a more self-defeating worldview, or one more dependent on the labor and resources of developing world others. Among the themes the compendium tracks are the profound and often violent renditions of anti-feminist arguments and, in some cases, the unvarnished misogyny that stands out as a common theme particularly among those incarnations of white nationalism that seek to portray white men as victims of a culture that they’re no longer entitled to dominate (though, under Donald Trump they’ve certainly made this effort). While this anti-gay, anti-reproductive rights, muscular effort to reinstall heteropatriarchal institutions large and small is commonly cloaked in rhetoric that’s more explicitly racist, anti-Semitic, and/or militaristic, it makes clear that the place of women is subjugation to men—all the more so for non-white women. There are a good many arguments here, again, thinly veiled in other themes, that require a view of women as “naturally” in need of dominating male protection, as biologically programmed to want that protection for themselves and their presumed offspring, and as mentally ill if they reject male advances. The reader will also find a number of threads that, taken together, make sense of the emergence of the latest iteration of toxic masculinity, the Incel (the Involuntary Celibate). The Incel seeks to justify compulsory heterosexuality and/or female monogamy on the grounds that because women are shallow consumers of “lookism,” and thus empowered to turn away less attractive male sexual partners, men are entitled to institutions that enforce female sexual compliance. To be clear, I am not suggesting that every iteration of the Alt-Right and its fellow travelers share this absurd view of women, but it is unmistakably common to the ligature of this ideological universe to see women as inferior; the Incel movement is simply one foreseeable instantiation of a worldview predicated on white male entitlement.

I think it’s also true that we’re beginning to see the slow-motion implosion of the Alt-Right. From internal schisms to competition for the mantle of Alt-Right purity to back-biting to celebrity-mongering—there is much and fractious shrieking from inside a tent that was never that big to begin with. The recent efforts of Alt-Righters to distance themselves from QAnon are particularly head-shaking given that it’s precisely the same penchant for conspiracy mongering that gave rise to Birtherism, Climate Change Trutherism, Pizzagate, and a host of other absurd conspiracy theories that gave birth to QAnon.

I am open to corrections, but I make no promises to remove an article simply on the grounds of offense. We don’t live in that country—yet. To those who’d complain that this compendium is a “Leftist” analogue to TPUSA’s Professor Watchlist, and thus subject to the same complaint of hypocrisy, I say this: plainly, no. TP-PWL’s aims are to encourage harassment, censorship, and the repression of legitimate academic scholarship and pedagogy. Mine are to offer a topographical map of a wide range of agents and actors who, taken together, represent a vision of America radically different from the country we have now—a country whose institutions are profoundly endangered by this vision, especially as it’s currently personified in President Trump, his family, his cabinet, his associates and alliances. My aims, in other words, are to contribute to the defense and preservation of my country’s Constitution and Bill of Rights, its promise to equality, diversity, justice, compassion, opportunity, and political enfranchisement.

The compendium’s first section is devoted to Turning Point USA because it serves as one central pivot around which many of the other sources turn either closely or through degrees of connection ranging from Neo-Nazi to Alt-Right, from Alt-Lite to New Right. It’s also where this larger project began—with my effort to convince my own university that Professor Watchlist was a real danger to the academy, and the TPUSA does, in fact, deliberately misrepresent their objectives and tactics. There is modest overlap in inclusion across the compendium (though I have sought to minimize this as much as possible)—some articles just do belong in two or more sections.

The Young America’s Foundation warned in an internal memo that TPUSA and its founder Charlie Kirk could cause “long-term damage” to conservative students and the conservative movement. A report by the Washington Examiner detailed portions of that memo Wednesday afternoon. While Kirk and TPUSA Chief Operating Officer Tyler Bowyer declined to comment for that story, they passed along an official statement through a spokesman after viewing screenshots of the YAF document to prove its veracity. That memo was not made public until late Thursday morning when the Young America's Foundation published it in its entirety. Somehow on Wednesday evening, screenshots — images identical to the ones the Washington Examiner shared with Kirk and Bowyer — made their way into hands of Paul Joseph Watson. Kirk and Bowyer did not respond to requests for comment for this story.”

15. <https://youtu.be/3vw9N96E-aQ> : "If you have haven't yet watched Q Anon's "The Plan to Save the World" — do it now. "Yes folks. The criminals I am referring to are famous politicians, actors, singers, CEOs and celebrities. People who have earned our trust, respect and admiration. They have done very bad things that are all fully known and documented, and they will be severely punished. Those of us who have followed Q since the beginning will be here to help you make sense of the coming events. We are among the first to realize that our petty partisan divisions are just trivial distractions, and we are all enslaved by a hidden enemy. We realize that the problem was never Capitalism or Socialism, Democrat or Republican, black or white, Muslim or Christian. We know it was just very powerful criminals who had too much power and were crushing us under debt and asinine entertainment, Fellow slaves. It's time to buckle your seatbelt, recognize your true enemy, and embrace a new future that we all owe to the brave patriots who risked their lives to achieve this victory against the greatest force of evil the world has ever seen."
